Annie Ziegelbein Honored as LEA's Distinguished Lutheran Elementary Teacher

Annie Ziegelbein was selected to receive Lutheran Education Association's 2024 Distinguished Lutheran Elementary Teacher Award.

A 16-year veteran in Lutheran education, Annie is a fifth-grade teacher at Trinity Lutheran School, Jefferson City, Mo. She has also served in Morton, Ill. Annie earned a Bachelor of Education from Concordia University, Seward and a Masters of Curriculum and Instruction from William Woods University.

Annie said, "Some of my greatest joys in working with students come from those moments of clarity, engagement, and excitement from students throughout the learning process. I love helping students work through challenging concepts and watching their confidence build as they practice the skills being taught. However, my ultimate joy comes in being able to build meaningful relationships with my students which allows me to share Jesus' love with them each and every day. I am thankful to be able to engage in meaningful conversations in our devotions, class studies, or in the teachable moments throughout the day."

She also says, "My greatest challenge as a school teacher in Lutheran ministry is not having enough hours in the day to serve in all the capacities in which I would like to serve."

Supporting Annie's nomination, her administrator said, "Annie is continually seeking ways to engage students in her Social Studies and Language Arts lessons. One way that she does this is through the use of flexible seating in her classroom. This provides the students with a level of ownership and security as they get to be part of the decision-making process regarding the type of work space they get to use in the classroom. She has successfully integrated technology into her lessons as well as her communication with parents. Through implementation of PearDeck, Educreations, and Google Classroom she has brought her lessons to life and captured her student's attention."

One parent commented, "When I see Annie at school, at church, or at the numerous Trinity and community activities she supports, she always has a smile on her face, makes meaningful eye contact with adults and children, and has a wonderful sincere warmth as she asks you how you are doing. Our children's faith in Jesus and their understanding of their religion bloomed with Annie as a teacher. Annie also always starts her parent meetings in thoughtful prayer demonstrating her commitment to serving Jesus consistently and joyfully."

Annie's personal mission statement is "My personal mission is to use the gifts and talents that God has given me to teach the love of Christ and to serve Christ by serving others."

Dr. Jonathan Laabs, Executive Director of Lutheran Education Association, will be here next Sunday, April 21 to recognize Mrs. Ziegelbein at the 10:30am church service!
